

University High School Administration
421 N. Arcadia Ave.
Tucson, AZ 85711

Dear University High School Administration:

We are University High School students, alumni, teachers and faculty. We write to insist that University High School craft and implement a comprehensive School curricula plan addressing structural racism and how to be antiracist.

As you are no doubt aware, major protests have broken out across the country—including in Tucson—in the wake of policemen's videotaped murder of George Floyd in Minneapolis, among countless other similar events. The American people are heartbroken and angry at the loss of another Black life at the hands of police, and they are speaking up.

Conversations and education about endemic racism (i.e., the racist policies that have shaped and continue to shape this country) must not only take place in our streets, but also in our classrooms. Educational institutions including University High School have a responsibility to examine the roles that privilege and bias play within its walls. As teachers and administrators, you have the power and responsibility to broaden your students' understanding of the world. And you must. You take pride in grooming the next generation of leaders, and those leaders must understand how far we are from, and how we must fight for, racial equity.

We cherish our University High School education and the values we learned and examined while we were students. University High School has historically been and continues to be a predominantly White institution. While we were students there, this fact was rarely, if ever, discussed. We were not encouraged to examine or question our own role in supporting structural racism or the ways in which the majority of the student body benefited from it. Neither were we taught how to confront racial inequities and eradicate policies that have racist outcomes. In fact, we were taught a mythology proffered as history that eviscerates the reality of racism in this country since its inception and the role that Black people and minorities played in building this country while being marginalized by it. This is no longer acceptable.

At a minimum, we urge UHS to consider requiring a quarter or semester long course for all students; require racial justice education and training for all teachers; and host annual antiracism seminars for teachers and students alike. We also insist that UHS support any teacher and student led efforts to advance racial equity, such as forming book and film clubs, peacefully protesting, and seeking change in the community at large. There is a wealth of resources available to guide UHS as it introduces these critical subjects, and we recommend you consult antiracism experts to go about this the right way.

The world has changed since the alumni among us were University High School students. In the intervening years, the American populace has mourned the unnecessary deaths of too many people of color and witnessed the consequence of racist policies in effect for generations. Police brutality and structural racism is not new, only more visible by videos circulated on social media. More and more Americans have realized that the time for a serious reckoning with the nation's racial reality has long since come. There is no excuse for places like University High School not to participate in that reckoning and take a leadership role in making positive change.

We know firsthand the innumerable ways a University High School education benefits any student who walks through the school's gates. But, without serious self-reflection on the part of the school and establishing a plan to teach about structural racism and becoming antiracist, University High School is also doing its students a grave disservice.

Sincerely,

UHS Students, Alumni, Teachers and Faculty
